

Brown spider distinguishing traits

Violin shape on cephalothorax

Prominent pedipalpi (the “antennae”-looking shapes on either side of the darker-brown chelicerae)

Three pairs of eyes arranged symmetrically on the leading edge of the cephalothorax. Most spiders have eight eyes; the browns have only six

Light tan coloration and long, thin legs; at first glance some mistake this spider for a daddy-long-legs while others assume it’s a small wolf-type spider.
